4. a) Read the following and answer the questions on the poem or prose, piece :
- Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great Civil War, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that nation might give. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or to detract. The World will little note no long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us-that from these honoured dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.

 My chair was nearest to the fire
 In every company
 That talked of lover or politics
 Ere Time transfigured me.
 Though lads are making Pikes again
 For some conspiracy,
 And crazy rascals range their fill
 At human tyranny;
 My contemplations are of Time
 That has transfigured me.
 There's not a woman turns her face
 Upon a broken tree,
 And yet the beauties that i loved
 Are in my memory;
 I spit into the face of Time
 That has Transfigured me.

- a) Identify the refrain in the poem. 1

“The Enlightened One”

(The word ‘Buddha’ literally means ‘The Enlightened One’. This was the title given to Siddharth Gautama.) He became the founder of religion called Buddhism. Buddha was born as a prince in the 6th century B.C. in a warrior community of Nepal called ‘sakyas’. Although brought up in luxury, he did not show any attachment to the material delights. (When Buddha was young, he had a philosophical temperament. Though he had everything necessary for worldly pleasures, he was somehow dissatisfied.)

One day, the prince went out of his palace (on his chariot to get a glimpse of the town. On his way, he saw three sights which he had never seen before.) (a sick man, an old man and a dead man.) These had a deep impact on his mind and made him sad and thoughtful.)

He could sense the eternal truths of life and realised that life was full of sorrows and suffering. He wondered, if sickness, old age and death ultimately grabs everyone’s life then what was the goal of life and how men could best use the comparatively short life’s they had on their earth. These questions kept on haunting his mind.

- 1) What was the title given to Siddhartha Gautama ?
- 2) Name the warrior community in which Buddha was born ?

Write a persuasive paragraph of about 100 words highlighting the effects of heavy rainfall.

VIII. Write the summary of the given passage. Give a suitable title. 5

When we survey our lives and efforts, we soon observe that almost the whole of our actions and desires are bound up with the existence of other human beings. We notice that whole nature resembles that of the social animals. We eat food that others have produced, wear clothes that others have made, live in house that others have built. The greater part of our knowledge and beliefs has been passed on to us by other people though the medium of our language which others have created. Without language and mental capacities, we would have been poor indeed comparable to higher animals.

We have, therefore, to admit that we owe our principal knowledge over the least of the fact of living in human society. The individual if left alone from birth would remain primitive and beast like in his thoughts and feelings to a degree that we can hardly imagine. The individual is what he is and has the significance that he has, not much in virtue of the individuality, but rather as a member of a great human community, which directs his material and spiritual existence from the cradle to grave.

THE THIEF AND HIS MOTHER

One day, a young boy came home with a book that he had stolen from one of his classmates. He showed it to his mother proudly. The mother instead of being angry, encouraged him.

A few days later, the boy stole a cloak and brought it to his mother. Once again, his mother praised him. As the years passed by, the boy continued to steal and finally grew up to be a dangerous thief.

One day while stealing, the thief was caught and was taken to court where he got the death penalty. On the day he was to be punished, a huge crowd had gathered to see the thief. The thief's mother who was also present there was crying loudly.

When the thief heard his mother crying so much, he said, "I want to say something to my mother in her ear." When his mother came near him, he bit her ear. When she cried in pain he said, "This is your punishment. If only you had corrected me when I first stole, I would have never become a thief!"
